

American Society for Cybernetics

The Warren McCulloch Award of the American Society for Cybernetics is awarded to

Allenna Leonard

for outstanding and profound lifelong contributions to the nurturing of cybernetics.

Allenna Leonard helped develop the work that normally appears under the name of Stafford Beer,
and since Beer's death has promoted and extended it as a major contribution in the praxis of cybernetics.

She has also acted as President of both the ASC and the ISSS, bringing to each a courtesy and quiet knowledge and authority.
She has worked more than most to provide connection and communication between different systems and cybernetics groups, thus bringing our field more together.

A handwritten signature in blue ink that reads "Ranulph Glanville." The signature is written in a cursive, flowing style.

Ranulph Glanville
President of the American Society for Cybernetics 2014/08/08