

American Society for Cybernetics

The Warren McCulloch Award of the American Society for Cybernetics is awarded to

Jennifer Wilby

for outstanding and profound lifelong contributions to the nurturing of cybernetics.

Few have done more than Jennifer Wilby to heal the breach between different societies in the systems and cybernetics world, particularly the ISSS (SGSR as was) and the ASC.

In her roles both as president and as administrator of the ISSS and now, also, as President of the UK Systems Society, Wilby has worked tirelessly to bring understanding from one society to another; to open doors. She is a healer and a catalyst bringing the disparate together.

Yet, Jennifer Wilby has still found time to create a body of significant research in management, which she teaches from a systems perspective; in addition to lecturing and supervising research students.

A handwritten signature in blue ink that reads "Ranulph Glanville". The signature is written in a cursive, flowing style.

Ranulph Glanville
President of the American Society for Cybernetics
2014/08/08